

Fifteen Theses for a New Political Model for Africa

1. A Borderless Continent

We Africans affirm that Africa is one homeland. We call for a visa-free continent where every African can move freely across our ancestral lands without artificial barriers, reclaiming the unity denied us by colonial borders.

2. A Continental Presidency and Democratic Federation

We call for the establishment of a Continental Presidency a collective leadership that embodies the democratic will of all Africans within a Pan-African Federation grounded in shared values, mutual accountability, and the sovereignty of the people.

3. True Self-Determination

We Africans reject the politics of dependency. We call for the end of donor-driven governance and the rebirth of genuine self-determination rooted in our own resources, ideas, and creative capacities.

4. A Common Security and Defense Pact

We call for a unified continental defense and security command to protect Africa's sovereignty, safeguard our seas, secure our cyberspace, and bring an end to all foreign military bases and interventions on African soil.

5. Monetary Liberation

We Africans call for the total abolition of all colonial currencies and the establishment of a single African currency, within a binding and time-bound framework, as a cornerstone of true economic independence.

6. Reparations and Restitution

We demand for reparations in tangible form through debt cancellation, technology transfer, restitution funds, and the unconditional return of Africa's looted cultural heritage. Justice delayed must no longer be justice denied.

7. Shared Prosperity through Self-Reliance

We Africans call for a continental renaissance of self-reliance, built on intra-African trade, industrial collaboration, and shared prosperity where no African nation stands alone or left behind.

8. Economic Sovereignty through Value Creation

We call for an end to the export of raw materials and the birth of an Africa that refines, manufactures, and innovates in its own name owning the full value chain of its wealth.

9. A Pan-African Cultural Renaissance

We Africans call for a cultural awakening that restores the pride, dignity, and creative genius of our civilization. Our art, languages, and traditions must once again define the rhythm of our progress.

10. Partnerships of Equals

We call for international alliances based on equality, dignity, and mutual respect partnerships that empower Africa, not perpetuate dependency or subservience.

11. Strengthening the African Family

We Africans call for the protection and empowerment of the African family the foundation of our social fabric through policies that support young families, uphold parental dignity, and secure the future of our children.

12. Climate Justice and Ecological Stewardship

We call for climate justice and responsible guardianship of Africa's lands, forests, waters, and minerals ensuring that our natural wealth serves the people, not foreign exploiters or corporate greed.

13. Digital Sovereignty for a New Age

We Africans call for full ownership and control over our data, technology, and innovation systems building a digital Africa that serves African development and shields our continent from technological domination.

14. Inclusive Governance and Equal Leadership

We call for the full inclusion of youth and women at every level of governance not as tokens, but as equal architects of Africa's destiny and builders of its future institutions.

15. Guardianship of the African Commons

We Africans call for the protection of our collective inheritance our land, water, energy, and biodiversity as sacred trusts held in stewardship for generations yet to come.
